BASE BALL

A special baseball attraction was staged here Tuesday evening for the benefit of the junior team. The juniors played the "Vets" in a rip snorting may come style game with plenty of enthusiasm on both sides, and a good crowd of fans watching them on. The game produced many a good laugh, with the occasional spill that gave the resilient a limp which required a rub and a push to replace the seemingly dislocated joints.

The young fellows were more fortunate in making the rounds but were not there when it came to pushing the pill out into the wide open spaces of the ball park.

The "Vets" had not forgotten many of the old tricks of former days and had no difficulty in getting an early lead on the boys, and which they increased to 25 runs to 7.

Several nice high balls were taken care of by the "Vets", but the grounders were to many—just another greased pig as it passed through their hands and legs and bounded out beyond into the hop along brush.

Doug Henderson will no doubt have quite a few calls for his most reliable liniment to assist in putting the old pep back into numerous parts of the anatomy.

On the "Vets" line up were many of the Old-Timers of the district including the following: M. G. Clever, B. Hummel, Fred Clever, Roy Hummon, George Rhodes, P. Gatenby, Geo. Depue W. H. McIntyre, E. Knudson, A. T. Hopkins, Harry Smith, Chamberlin, Ashmore, and Harvey Jopling.

The Sunday games in Lethbridge drew a record crowd to see Champion defeated in both the afternoon and evening. The brand of ball played was good, but our team wasn't quite good enough to meet the continued bombardment of the miners who chalked up a 5-4 score in the afternoon and a 7-3 for the evening game.

Nanton defeated Champion in Nanton Wednesday evening by a score of 5-4.

PHEASANTS IN CANADA

Raising Game Birds on Farm, Field and Estate is Simple, Profitable to Farmers and Valuable to Sportsman.

BY O. A. ZUERCHER, Laurentian Mountains Pheasantry, Rawdon, Que.

HATCHING: The incubation period is 28 to 31 days. Fifteen eggs are usually called a setting but eggs may also be had by the hundreds and thousands and may be successfully incubated and brooded artificially.

Eggs on arrival from a game breeder should remain, container unopened, until ready to set. They should be stored in a cool place, preferably a cellar, and turned twice daily. They should be set as soon as possible. A fine light weight hen, preferably an Orpington, is best for this purpose. They should be set on dummy eggs from the time the eggs are shipped from the breeder.

The best nest-box is 10x10, with a wire fly-screen door (hinged) opening upwards, in front. Underneath this door should be a 6 inch piece of board to retain the nesting material. A 3x3 inch hole, cut in the bottom of the nest, and pointed down with the hand into a saucer-shaped hole in the floor, should not be too large, but enough inside to permit eggs to pile up in the centre of the nest.

Over this inverted and place a little fine mesh, or similar soft material. It is not necessary to place the nest outside. A cool place is best, as any shed will do. Before placing hen in nest put a few drops of U.S. Nicotine Sulphate on the nest and under the bay and thoroughly dust the hen with a good commercial fly powder.

Repeat the dusting and Nicotine Sulphate on the eighth and sixteenth days of the incubation period. When ready to set the hen, place in the nest the number of eggs she can comfortably cover, 15 to 18 for a medium-sized hen and 12 to 15 for a bantam. In very dry weather sprinkle the nest lightly with lukewarm water from the sixth to nineteenth days. The last sprinkling, on the nineteenth day, should be a thorough saturation of the whole nest. The condition of the nest may always be judged by the sound under the eggs. This sound should always be slightly moist, never soaking wet. If the soil is damp do not add water. The nest should be checked after period of incubation. The setting hen should be removed daily for feed, exercise and water.

The setting hen should be fed whole corn, wheat and a few oats but no greens. Give plenty of gravel or grit. If at any time the hen shows signs of leaving the house give her a drop of boiled rice. When hen is removed from nest for feeding leave her off from fifteen minutes to half an hour, depending on the weather. In cold weather cover the eggs with a flannel cloth. In placing the hen back on the nest first remove two-thirds of the eggs and when she has settled replace them.

When the eggs start to "pip" on the 22nd day, take the hen off gently and cover the eggs, since it is still too long for her to remain on the nest till the hatch is over and she will simply dirty the nest or become restless and crush the chicks. When the hen is off the nest, after eggs have "pipped," cover the eggs with a warm, damp flannel cloth, as this retains the valuable moisture useful to the hatching chick. When the hen has been replaced on the nest do not remove her again until the hatch is over and do not remove more all the shells, as these prevent the hen beating down too heavily on the chicks and crushing them. Leave her on the nest with the chicks until they are good and dry, generally until the morning after the hatch is over.

Before the hatch is over have the brood coop ready. Make the body of the brood coop 24x24, 16 high at front door end and 18 high at rear. Make a 30x30 removal roof, covered with asphalt three ply paper, then make a wood floor 24x24, also removable. This makes a three-piece coop. In front of the coop hinge a wire fly screen door, 12 wide and 16 high to open sideways. Inside the door three laths spaced about three inches apart and put on horizontally. This permits entry and exit of the chicks when the outside door is opened, but still retains the hen inside. Outside the coop make a yard with 12 or 14 wide boards, two feet by three feet, one end of the yard being attached to the body of the coop.

There was a special meeting of the Carmargay school board last Saturday, which was attended by Herbert A. Irwin, local member for the large school unit, to deal with the closing of Ryckman and Burwash schools. These schools have a attendance of six and ten pupils respectively and are situated west of town.

Mr. Irwin advised that he had visited the parents in the districts involved, and found that most of them were in favor of the change as they felt that the children would have more advantages and do better in the larger school.

Arrangements were made to close the two schools and have these pupils attend Carmargay school in future.

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued

Crump came in.

"Get pardon, m'lady," he said, "but

Cap'n Duff-Hooper sent his man over to say that he is riding at ten and will be pleased to have you join him."

"Ask him to tell Cap'n Duff-

Hooper that I'm sorry but I shan't be able to ride with him," said Rosa.

"Very good, m'lady."

"And Crump, we're saved."

"Saved, m'lady?"

"The castle and everything. Mr.

Bingley has come to our rescue."

"May I express my gratitude, sir," said Crump. "And I think you'll be interested to know that Elaine is in excellent working order, except that she squeaks a bit when she wags."

"Oh her springs," said Ernest.

"It was about to do so," said

Crump, and faded from the room.

In the kitchen Crump found Sloat happily polishing a silver plate and whistling "Happy Days are Here Again."

"Loss music and more elbow-grease, if you please," said the butler.

"But happy days are here again,

Mr. Crump," said Sloat. "To-day

we see the last of that lousy Yank."

"It was not aware that Mr. Bingley intends to leave us to-day," said

Crump.

"Well, I saw him packing his things, such as they are. Is he going to shoot the moon, do you know?"

"If, by that vulgar expression, you imply that Mr. Bingley is going to steal away without paying his rent," Crump said, frostily, "you are doing a grave injustice to a most honorable gentleman."

"Well, he's going, and that's something," said Sloat. "Wonder what he'll pit. Good riddance, I say.

Happy days are here."

Sloat rose three inches from the floor on the top of Crump's toe.

"And if you'd like another dose of the same, young Sloat," Crump said,

"let me hear you pass any more remarks about Mr. Ernest Bingley."

"In the breakfast room the earl was demolishing his third dish of cold

eggs.

"Rather drowsy this a.m.," he remarked. He could not have meant himself.

"Oh, I dressed up for your birthday," Ernest said.

"Did you also pack your bag for my birthday?" asked the earl. "I fell over it in the hall."

"My mouth is up, you know, sir."

"Don't be a gum-drop," said the earl. "Stay with us as long as you like as our guest."

"Thank you, sir, but I just can't,"

said Ernest. "I'd like to, though, very, very, very much."

"None just one good reason why you won't stay on and at least spend

Christmas with us."

"Business,"

"Business be blowed," said the earl. "Your people can take care of it. You can get in touch with them by phone—if we had a telephone. Tell you what—I'll have one put in."

"In terribly sorry," said Ernest,

"but there is a matter which needs my personal attention. I must leave you for New York at once."

"You'll be back, of course."

"Some day, I hope."

"Soon."

"Not very soon, I'm afraid," said

Ernest.

"You'll always be welcome at Bingley Castle, Ernest, old chum," said the earl.

"Thank you."

"Well, if you must go, you must go.

I expect," said the earl. "When do you sail to do so?"

"On the first boat I can get out of London."

"When will you go?" the earl said.

"Next week, Rosa."

"Yes," she said, her eyes on her

eggs.

"You must keep in touch with us,

Ernest," said the earl.

"Yes, sir."

"I'll collect souvenir post-cards, you know?"

"I'll send you some."

"With Indians on them?"

"Yes, sir, with Indians on them."

"That's jolly good of you, Ernest.

You must not forget us," the earl said.

"I'll never forget—Bingley Castle,"

Ernest said.

Ernest, hat in hand, overcoat on arm, stood in the castle hall.

"Sloat is getting out the car," Lady

Rosa said. "I hope you don't mind

if I don't go to the station with you.

I loathe platform good-byes."

"I hate good-byes myself," said

Ernest.

"I wish you weren't going, Ernest."

"I don't feel as if I were going home," Ernest said. "I feel as if I were leaving home. Standing here was the most beautiful thing that ever happened to me."

"I'm glad you feel that way about us."

"I guess it was the most beautiful thing that ever happened to anybody."

"Will you write to me?"

Ernest did not look at her.

"No, Rosa, I won't," he said.

"You've never talked about it."

"I can't tell you."

"Please—"

"It would be—well, it would not be right."

"Not right?" Oh, Ernest, I think

I understand."

"Do you, Rosa?"

"This matter of business you must attend to personally—tell me, Ernest—is it a girl?"

"Ernest, Bingley—uncleared and answered his hat. In a low voice he cried,

"Yes, Rosa. It is a girl."

"You've never talked about it."

"I didn't think you'd be interested,"

Ernest said.

"Ernest! You know—you should have known! He's interested."

"Why, Rosa?"

"It doesn't matter now. Are you sure?"

"Certainly."

"When will you be married?"

"As soon as I reach New York."

"And she likes it?" Rosa asked.

"Yes. I mean she has the same coloring and voice and eyes—and things," said Ernest.

"How does she like it?"

"Do?"

"Your finance, of course."

"Well, I guess you'll call her a social girl," Ernest said. "Very social. Very athletic. Bides horseback, drives her own airplanes—the usual sort."

"How sporting! She must be painfully rich."

"Oh, she is. Her father owns all the hotels in Chicago."

"All of them?"

"What's her name?"

"Her name?"

"That's what I said."

"Why it's Jo—Rovena."

"Rovena?"

"No, just Rovena," said Ernest.

"Rovena what?"

Ernest hesitated.

"Surely you haven't forgotten," said Rosa.

"Of course not. It's—Castle. Rov-ena—Rovena. So you're going from one castle to another."

Ernest's laugh was distinctly a fourth-rate expression of hilarity.

"That's right. Castle to Castle," he said.

"I hope she'll make me very happy."

"I hope you'll be happy, too, Rosa."

"Oh, I'll have fun. No worries about the castle—arrow, I mean. Lots of hunting and riding. Why couldn't

I be happy?"

"I suppose," said Ernest—"I suppose you'll marry yourself some day."

"Not myself. But I suppose I shall marry a man, if asked."

"Duff-Hooper?"

"It seems to me to be leading the field at the moment."

"You won't get married right away, will you?"

"Maybe. Maybe not. I may shop around."

"I wish you would. I mean—well—

—well, I'm said to be impregnated by having nitrogen salts and synthetic resin mixed in it."

"If only we could tell when the future was beginning!"

"Let's stop talking about me," said

Rosa. "You must start soon if you're to catch your train. What can be keeping Father?"

"Where is he?"

"Set him had to go to his study to get something."

"What?"

"A parting gift, perhaps," said

Rosa. "I say, Ernest, you must have a picture of Miss Castle with you."

"To be most interested to see it."

"I haven't—I mean—well, I've a sort of picture," said Ernest.

"Please let me see it."

"All right."

He took from his suit-case the old miniature of Lucy Bingley.

"She's charming!" exclaimed Lady

Rosa. "And she does look a little like me. Prettier, though."

"She is not."

"Why, Ernest! Is that any way for a bridegroom to talk?"

"It's the truth," he said.

"Steven told Rovena that," advised

Rosa. "Why is she in fancy dress costume?"

"Amateur theatricals."

"The Earl of Bingley came hurrying toward them, bearing a large basket.

He presented it to Ernest.

"I want you to have this as a memento of your visit and as a very slight token of my great esteem."

"It is not diamonds. I wish it were."

"Thank you very much, sir," said

Ernest.

Outside the door there was a sound like a riving horse in a tunnel.

"I think I hear our car," said the earl. "So does most of Somersetshire, I expect. I say, Ernest, what's that picture?"

"His fiancée," Rosa told the earl.

"Really! Mind if I have a peek?"

CO-OPERATION NEEDED FOR NECESSARY IMPROVEMENTS

By Hugh Miller

During these hot summer months nothing is more enjoyable than an afternoon spent picnicking at the local recreation ground and swimming pool on the Bar U ranch.

There are many attractions offered. The swimming hole has been cleaned and deepened.

The trees and shrubs offer pleasant shade in which to eat lunch or to rest. A soft ball diamond is laid out on a level spot near the river and there are steep hills for the adventurous to climb.

There are, however, several drawbacks. There is no bath house for the men. There is no well to provide fresh cold water. The number of benches and tables is limited and a new diving board is needed.

To provide all these would require only a small sum of money. All the necessary labor

Dr. DAVID NICOL

DENTAL SURGEON

In Champion Friday only has been volunteered. It is hoped that, by solicitations from the business men and farmers the needed funds will be obtained and the improvements made.

So remember that if you have a dollar or two which you feel you can spare donate it to this worthy cause.

TURNER VALLEY FIELD STILL IN RED DESPITE ITS BIG PRODUCTION

Although the Turner Valley oil field produced $5,000,000 in crude oil last year, and in previous years has produced millions in gasoline and naphthalene, more money has been put into it than has ever been taken out. The fact is that it may be years before the field as a whole is out of the red.

Just now Turner Valley is the object of great interest but many of the stories about it belong to the "liquid gold" myths relating to oil. These kind of myths continue to be regarded as realities despite all evidence to the contrary.

News of a new well comes out with stories that it has a daily flow of 1,000 barrels or more of oil, and people exclaim—"It must be nice to strike easy money like that." They forget that to get the well the producer had to spend $10,000 to $20,000 on a gamble, forgetting all about the wells which never come in. There are glamorous stories of fortunes won but not a word about those lost.

This condition does not just apply to the Turner Valley oil field alone. It is true of most important fields in North America. A statistician has computed that since Drake drilled his first oil well in Pennsylvania in 1860, the average cost of finding and recovering a barrel of oil has been $1.41, although the average return to the producer has been only $1.21.

It is true that those who combine good luck and good judgment may make a fortune in oil. But the truth also is the oil industry as a whole is operating at a loss.

A meeting of the Official Board of the United Church was held in the Manse on Monday June 27th.

The treasurer's report showed that the recent canvass had been quite successful, the Pastor's salary for the current year being paid in full and the arrears in salary for 1937 substantially reduced.

A vote of thanks was extended to the Ladies' Aid and to all those who contributed to the success of the canvass and to the evening given to Mr. and Mrs. Smith on June 16th.

A meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the home of Mrs. A. Lawrence on Tuesday afternoon. The Aid recently put on a strawberry and ice-cream tea in the sample room and were well repaid for the labor, as there was a good attendance and they were successful in raising a substantial sum to apply on the salary of the minister. The ladies wish Rev. and Mrs. Smith and family every happiness in their new home and hope the change will prove beneficial to Mrs. Smith's health.

Card of Thanks

I wish to express my sincere appreciation for the many kindnesses shown me while I was in the Carmangay Hospital, especially the Doctors and nurses; also to my friends and neighbors for the flowers and letters sent.

Mrs. C. W. Folk.

Card of Thanks

On the eve of our departure for another field of labor, we wish to express our appreciation of the friendships we have found during our three years at Carmangay. Our children have made friends that no doubt will remain throughout life. It is with a sense of sadness we go and a feeling of goodwill to those ones we leave behind.

Rev. and Mrs. H. G. Smith

THE CHRONICLE

It wouldn't do to take a gun to go out for customers. Hunting customers requires a clever technique, but some business men are blind in their search for more business.

They are blind to the fact that advertising is good business. The investment in space in the columns of the Chronicle, is an investment which will return quickly and many times over in an increased sales volume.

Form the habit of keeping the news of your business before the public through the Chronicle. Our readers are quick to take advantage of shopping opportunities. Your business will increase and more trading will be done at home by the shoppers.

It is more convenient to trade at home. Readers of the home-town paper patronize our advertisers. You don't need a license to advertise. We'll be glad to help you solve your advertising problems.
